DETTS & BETTS JOY CAME FROM SORROW. TRAGEDY AND ROMANCE OF THE CZAR'S WEDDING.

> He Slew His Elder Brother by Accident and Then Married the Dead Man's Promised Bride-The Union Has Proved Happy.

The preparations now being made throughout Russia for the celebration of the silver wedding of the czar and czarina recall to mind the singularly sad circum stances under which it was contracted No wonder that the massive and striking features of Alexander III are often dark ened by a gloomy and unhappy expression For his marriage followed one tragedy and his accession to the throne another Of the latter it is unnecessary for me to speak here, for the circumstances of the terrible assassination of Alexander II, the Liberator of the Serfs. just ten years ago. are still so fresh in people's minds that it would be superfluous to reiterate the familiar details of the catastrophe. Of the sad events which led to the present em peror's marriage, however, far less is

The czarina was the betrothed-almost the widow-of Alexander III's elder brother, Nicolas. The latter died on the eve of the date appointed for his marriage from the effects of a blow struck during the course of some rough horseplay by the present emperor. Husband and wife for the first time at the deathbed of the Czarowitz Nicolas, who was brother of the one and the fiance of the other. A little more than a year afterward their wedding place at St. Petersburg.

It is impossible to conceive a greater con trast than that which existed between the two brothers, who were exceedingly fond of each other. Nicolas the elder bore a striking resemblance to his beautiful mother. He possessed the same delicate, clear cut and refined features and the same slender, elegant and graceful figure. His physical graces were on a par with those of his mind. Witty, clever and sparkling, his kindly epigrams and his harming verses remain to this day as an illustration of his brilliancy of intellect He was an ideal lover and under the cir cumstances it was not astonishing that his betrothed, Princess Dagmar of Denmark, the younger sister of the Princess of Wales, should have been passionately

While the education of Nicolas was al most entirely foreign, that of Alexander was left to Russians, his principal tutor having been the fanatical and bigoted Pobledonostzew, who, today, as procurate general of the boly synod, is the moving spirit of all the Jewish and Catholic perse cutions Uncomely and uncouth as a lad, surly tempered and dull witted, Alexander experienced the treatment of the ugly duckling, and was perpetually being even by the court dignitures and officials, in favor of his elder and far more popular prother, and, can well remember the dis come heir apparent to the crown of "all the Russias."

Betrothal Is the Greek-church is not a mere engagement in the manner that An glo-Saxons understand it, but a solemn eremony performed in church and almost as binding and important as that of mar riage itself. It was not, therefore, as mere fiancee but almost as wife that Princess Dagmar was summoned in all haste from Copenhagen to Nice late in the spring of 1865 to attend the deathbed of her im perial lover. Her grief was intense, and she only parted from the medallion con taining her dead lover's hair and portrait which she wore around her throat when she donned her wedding dress on the day of her marriage to Alexander III. The latter, too, appeared during the whole period preceding the wedding to see his lead brother's specter arising perpetually between himself and the fair lady whom the exigencies of national politics-but not love-required that he should lead to the altar as his bride. For during the entire conrtship-if courtship, indeed, it can be contracted under the very shadow of death should have resulted in such unalloyed domestic bliss. There is no royal or imtoward one another have been so unclouded since their marriage. The czarina has learned to love and admire the sound and stering honesty of her huge, burly and rather narrow minded husband, and is wholly wrapped up in him-never leaving him, and acting as his guardian angel. That he affection and devotion is returned with inserest by the czar is conclusively shown is the fact that he alone of all the That because the czar is conclusively with in erest by the czar is conclusively with in erest open and the alone of all the principle either past or present, of his house has maintained a strict and honorable observance of his marriage vows.

Ex-DIPLOMATIST.

Special to the Gazette. QUANAH, HARDEMAN COUNTY, TEX., NOV. 9.—Sunday night's passenger train left an hour late. Eleven miles west at the foot of a crade the engine struck a dead steer lying between the rails and within thirty feet of a twenty-four foot culvert. The tender, were derailed. Six panels of the track were torn up. The culvert was badly dam-aged. The tender box was badly broken. The bed of the tank was badly smashed. The coaches were unhurt. No one was injured. The train was running about eighteen miles an hour against a norther and rain; George Thorne, conduc-tor, Joe Hampton, engineer. Monday morning the passengers were transferred around the wreck. The track is now re-paired, and trains are running all right.

LOADED FOR WILD GEESE.

Three Boys Mistaken for a Big Black Gander-All Are Wounded. Special to the Gazette.

BONHAM, FANNIN COUNTY, TEX., NOV. 9.—Yesterday evening John Bassham, who lives three miles north of here, saw a large flock of wild geese light in the field. John, having no shot, cut a lot of slugs from a bar of lead, poured a handful of powder in his guy naving no shot, cut a lot of sings from a oar of lead, poured a handful of powder in his gun, and then a handful or so of sluzs. Thus loaded he proceeded to crawl to where he saw the geese light. Rising up he saw something moving, which he thought was a big black gander, and blazed away. The gander dropped, as did two of its companions, but when he reached the spot he was horrified to find he had shot three neighbor boys, John Van Sickle and his little brother and Jeff Stevenson. The Van Sickle boys are seriously, but it is not thought fatally, hurt. One, perhaps, will lose a leg. Stevenson was struck in the side with a slug, but he was only slightly CHICAGO, ILL., Nov. 2.—The fluctuation in the wheat market was a surprise to the oldest traders to-day. For forty-eight hours there have been copious rains throughout almost the entire wheat belt, and all reports agree that the benefit to the seeded crop is almost inestimable. Saturday morning's reports were that millions of acres of sown wheat in the great agricultural regions were either shrivelling upon the surface or drying up in the ground without sprouting, so dry and parched was the earth's surface. Copious rains have redeemed the crop in a great area, at least for the time being, but a drop in wheat on this account did the crop in a great area, at least for the time being, but a drop in wheat on this account did not materialize on the board. It is true a slight decline ruled the opening, but indications of a cold wave in the West and Northwest and reports of strong cables quickly dispatched the feeling of weakness, and the market quickly railied and was followed by a continued advance interrupted only by occasional fluctuations. The opening was about \(\frac{1}{2} \) & \(\frac{1}{2} \) (a lower than Saturday's closing and ruled easy, then became stronger, and with slight fluctuations advanced \(\frac{1}{2} \) (12), \(\frac{1}{2} \) (a seed off, prices declining \(\frac{1}{2} \) (2), then fluctuated and closing was about \(\frac{1}{2} \) (2) in the return saturday.

Corn was generally active, stronger and higher, the demand being sharp. November opened at 54c, closed at \(\frac{1}{2} \) (c. \(\frac{1}{2} \) (a) in \(\frac{1}{2} \) (a) is a dispensable of \(\frac{1}{2} \) (b) is a dispensable of \(\frac{1}{2} \) (c. \(\frac{1}{2} \) (c. \(\frac{1}{2} \) (c. \(\frac{1}{2} \) (c. \(\frac{1}{2} \) (a) is dispensable of \(\frac{1}{2} \) (c. \(\frac{1}{
